Itata Valley: The Itata Valley is one of Chile's oldest wine-growing regions and whose name means "abundant grazing" in Mapudungun. This is because it was the Mapuche people who inhabited this place before the arrival of the conquistadores. It is geographically located in the Bío-Bío Region within the Province of Ñuble. It features a humid Mediterranean climate, with lower temperatures than other valley. Clay and granite soils rich in minerals that enable great productivity and facilitate growth of traditional varieties such as Pais and Muscat of Alexandria, which predominate in the region.
